Dramatic Story Plane Disaster

MACHINE HURTLED 250 YDS

New York, May 30. Evidence today at the preliminary inquiry into the crash of the American Skymaster plane at La Guardia airfield, New York, — in which 39 people were killed—drew a picture of the plane hurtling 250 yards along the ground towards the end of the runway while the pilot tried desperately to stop it. Investigators of three Departments piecing together evidence of America's worst commercial airline disaster on the 3,500-foot runway found brakemarks indicating the pilot's fight to halt the plane, and discovered the fact that the United Airlines plane may never have been airborne.

Stadium Considerations

in Hongkong want to watch important football matches. They make a big crowd; much bigger than the combined attendances at oricket, tennis and lawn bowls. On such a basis it is conceded that soccer has a right to consideration. There is, however, an important distinction which cannot be overlooked: those who play and attend football games do not worry unduly where the field is situated; those who play cricket, tennis and lawn bowls are automatically restricted in choice of arena' by the special necessities of the games. Football can be played over any tennis courts or cricket grounds, but nelther tennis nor cricket can be enjoyed on any football field. Herein appears to lie one of the most important considerations when it comes to choosing a site for Hongkong's future football sindium. To dispossess older established cricket clubs in Happy Valley just because footballers like the site is no justification, especially when an ideal alternative is offering in the former polo-grounds at Causeway Bay. The suggestion that the police look kindly on the Happy Valley pro-

TT is estimated that 30,000 people ject because it helps their problem of dealing with the dispersal of large crowds, cuts no ice. Huge football stadiums in London, each with accommodation for sixty to cighty thousand speciators, are sited hi some of the most congested suburbs, yet dispersal is handled castly and without trouble. The theory that the site of Hongkong's football stadium must conform to the convenience of the police cannot be accepted; it is for the police to adapt themselves to the circumstances, wherever they may arise. It is also necessary, at this stage, once arain to warn both Government and the sponsors of this scheme against rushing into any decision. Wednesday's F.A. Council meeting rather suggested that the Association regards the stadium as something exclusive between liself and the Government. The idea cannot be tolerated. This is a public matter affecting many acctions of the community, more particularly as the indications are that the project will be financed from general' revenue. Government must not commit itself to a football stadium site until it receives approval extending far beyond that of the Hongkong Football Association.

"Great Expectations" is unques-tionably one of the ilnest films to

"The Egg And I"

Although the pictures have nothing in common, it is difficult to resist a comparison between "Great Expectations" and Hollywood's latest super-spectacle, a silly effusion called "The Egg and I," which was shown a few evenings carlier. Almost all the outstanding virtues of "Great Expectations" were outstanding faults in "The Egg and I."

The latter film likewise was adapted from a book, by Betty Macdonald, but the story was changed completely by the injection of an illogical and routine romantic triangle. The book, while it was no Dickenslan classic, related fairly humorously the experiences of a city girl transplanted by her husband to a rugged life of raising chickens on a dilapidated

There is, however, a minimum of comedy in the screen version, built upon some of the most decrepit stock situations known to the cinema-the fastidious city-bred girl wallowing in a mud puddle, fainting (to indicate. pregnancy) and later leaving her baby in the arms of a cab driver. This should provide sufficient illusstration of the so-called comic pat-

Bit Too Mature

Claudette Colbert and Fred Mac-Murray, stars of the film, are competent players when reasonably east, but are really a bit too mature for such kittenish performances. And despite all the advance, publicity, there aren't even very many chiekens in the picture.

This inconsequential offering, produced at a reported cost of $2,000,000 was given its premiere with all the false glamour of the Hollywood tradition. Avid spectators (without tickets) set in specially constructed bleachers outside the theatre to watch the arrival of mink and orchid-adorned celebrities. Several policemen pushed the paying patrons around (even the producers) as is they were so many suspected subversives.—Associated Press.

CRONIN NOVEL

Opening at the King's Theatre today is the film version of A. J. Cronin's bestseller, "The Green Years," the story of the little Irish boy, Robert Shannon.

'As in the book, the story begins with the adoption of Robert by the narrow-minded and pennypinching Papa Leckie and the feud between domineering Grandma Leckie and the boy's irascible great-grandfather over which is to guide his schooling. The narrative then traces the "green years" through which Robert grows into manhood, his first initiation into the classroom, his puppy love adoration of Alison Keith, his graduation and his failure to complete the examinations for a scholarship.

The Cronin characterisations are brought to life by an excellent cast Charles Coburn plays Grandpa Gow; Tom Drake plays Robert and Beverly Tyler is Alison.

London, May 20.

One of the biggest manhunts in Britain's crime history ended today when three young men were formally remanded on a charge of murdering Alec de Antiquis in Charlotte Street, Soho, London, three weeks ago.

The accused are Charles Henry Jenkins, aged 23, Christopher James Geräghty, 20, and Terence John Peter Hold, 17.

De Antiquis, a passing motor-cyclist, was shot and killed when trying to prevent three gunmen escaping after an attempted robbery at a jeweller's shop.—Reuter.

HE man with the bulge in his cont pocket ran quickly down the steps of the white, bomb-splintered central police station at Savile-row, W. I walked three paces behind him as he crossed the scarred spaces of bombed buildings.

It was 9 p.m. When he came to the narrow patchwork of Soho streets behind Piccadilly, where the foreign cafes and clubs form a Maltese, Italian, French oasis in the centre of London, he hunched his shoulders and walked more slowly.

Detective Sergeant Nick-which is not his real name—of the Murder Squad, was starting his three-hour patrol to find the men who killed motor-cyclist Alec de Antiquis In Charlotte street. Soho.

The police know that the triggersilly men they are looking for will shoot it out. They have been told that they can carry guns as a temporary measure "in exceptional circumstances."

Then he would walk to an open telephone. No one who heard his conversation would have realised who he was. He dialled and breathed into the phone. "This is Nick. Is everything all right? Right. Will call you back."

Police switchboards all over London last night were receiving these nonchalant calls every few minutes. Out of this careful routine It is hoped will emerge the clue to the killers.

9.45 P.M.

LOOKED at my watch: It was 9.45 p.m. We were opposite a cafe in Greek-street with wide uncurtained shop windows, and the light from them making a strong golden patch on the pavement. The cafe was convenient for crooksvillains as the police call thembecause through the wide windows they could see anyone coming.

This cuts both ways. It was just i as easy for us to see inside by standing across the narrow street.

We stood there for 15 minutes. The men in the long Americanstyle jackets with belts, and greasy out of chipped cups and talking to each other heads close together.

Oh, the melancholy interest of secing a national heritage in danger, just because we need more electricity! A power station is in competition with a cathedral. London laments uneasily under the troublesome choice: a view or a volt.

It can hardly have escaped the keener students of mass-indignation that bitter words now bridge the Thames between Southwark and the City: must there be a new generating station to store across at St. Paul's Cathedral? Must there be a generating station at all? Yes. Will it work? Certainly. Will it—the fountain-pens rattle in a thousand scabbards-Spoil The View?

But remember that on any day throughout the year nearly 3,000 boys are deprived of their liberty in Borstal. Most of them want to break away and go back to mother or wife or girl. They can do so at almost every hour of the day or night.

THE law-abiding citizen, reading that two out of three thousand Borstal boys have broken out and done damage may condemn the Borstal system.

But he may say, more reasonably. "How wonderful it is that three thousand might escape and only two have done so?"-

HOW did the Manufacturers Life get its name? When the company was formed in 1887, most Canadians were dependent on agriculture for their livelihood. Sir John A. Macdonald was Prime Minister. His famous "National Policy" was being debated in every town and hamlet.

What's in a Name?

Sir John claimed that no country could be great with only one industry. Manufacturing activities were needed to balance the economy-broaden the market-utilize the bent of thousands towards manufacturing pursuits. Full national development called for "manufacturers". .The choice of that name for the Company was in tune with the spirit of the times and was a tribute to Sir John who was the Company's first president.

The word "Manufacturers" stood for progress and The Manufacturers Life has progressed with the land that gave it birth. Its activities have spread far beyond her shores. Itis known throughout the world as a sound financial institution.

First resolution for the new cricket season is that we must get down to some real cricket played by real cricketers.

There were happenings during the Australian tour which should be put behind us for good. We certainly don't want to waste time arguing whether the umpires are

Moreover, we don't want | players declaring that they had to appeal against the light or waste time instead of using it because these things were necessary in order to win a match.

The way to win a match is to play cricket, and that is the way we shall make cricket live in this new season of golden opportunity for the game.

British Scheme For Indian Settlement Will Be Made Known Monday

BY FRASER WIGHTON Reuter's Political Correspondent

London, May 30. Britain, when Indian leaders meet with the Viceroy at New Delhi on Monday, will make her position clear to India and the whole world, when, presumably for the last time, she commends the Cabinet Mission's scheme for a settlement in securing the essential unity of the country.

But, although Mahatma Gandhi's espousal of the plan and Congress Socialist support have aroused some hope of a last-minute resurgence of interest, few prophets at this late stage are bold enough to predict acceptance of the Mission formula.

It is the conviction of observers, moreover, that Britain now feels the situation is so urgent and the possibility of deterioration so great that no protracted re-examination of the Mission scheme is possible.

Upon the Indian leaders will tatives the further responsibility of be laid the responsibility of say- deciding what form the division is to ing whether India is to remain whatever decisions are made, Briunited or divided.
